The Greater Lehigh Valley Writers Group, GLVWG, is a not-for-profit organization of Lehigh Valley writers who seek to provide a support network and resource field for its membership.

Established in February 1993, the group has grown from a mere five to over one hundred and fifty active writers of many genres and specialties.

Monthly Meetings:

Monthly membership meetings of the GLVWG feature topical lectures and group discussions on a variety of issues related to the craft and business of writing.

The Writers Café:

Much of what GLVWG members can learn from one another comes not from format interviews or prepared speeches, but from the art of conversation, where improvised exchanges garner new contacts, shared tips and resources, inspiration and emotional support. The Writers Café promotes the type of interpersonal alchemy that defies prediction.

Critique Groups:

To promote writing excellence, GLVWG facilitates the formation of critique groups, which consist of writers who meet at their convenience and share their work in order to find ways to improve it.

Workshops:

Who among us can say they have no need to improve their craft? Through workshops offered to members, GLVWG offers area writers the opportunity to learn from master teachers and published writers.

Annual Writers Conference:

Ever wonder if you have what it takes to get published? The Write Stuff is the place to find out. Each spring, GLVWG sponsors a conference to bring together writers and publishing professionals for an intensive, day-long event.

The conference features workshops, keynote addresses and plenty of networking opportunities to interact with writers from all areas of the publishing spectrum. Participants also have the opportunity to meet with a potential agent or editor.
